JUAN DE SANTANDER SPICE ROUTE
THE CANTABRIAN SAILOR FROM CUETO WHO WAS IN THE FIRST WORLD TOUR
In Magellan and Elcano's trip with the purpose of finding new spice trade routes –alternative to Cristoper Columbus'–, which turned out to be the first world tour, 265 sailors were boated in five ships. Three years later only one, Victoria's ship, arrived with 19 crew members and Juan Sebastián Elcano in charge. Among the sailors there was a Cantabrian, Juan de Santander, from Cueto. He left as a cabin boy, the lowest position in the boat, but we're certain that to survive such deed Sandokan's style, he must've ended up being at least a boatswain. From this trip they brought clove, ginger, turmeric, nutmeg, pepper, cumin and spices of all kinds. They also managed to maje a profit of 346.220 maravedies after covering the expedition costs. We could say that this 'Santanderino' was one of the men who leaded the spice route, and that's why we want to pay a little homage to him by mixing the spices we bring from those countries where Juan de Santander went with our local shepherds' products. If there's something us Cantabrians can brag about, it's being great sailors and shepherds.
